*Jamo... Saying goodbye to you yesterday was one of the hardest days of my life.
The place was jam packed, bursting at the seams with people who loved n adored you! The most wonderful things were said about you, and I knew you were there watching and listening, and blushing! I loved how your lil face n ears used to go bright red when you blushed or were shy.
The love in that room was amazing! Yet so was the sadness.
You are missed beyond what any words could ever describe.
Watching the tears stream down your beautiful son's face damn near broke me!
You were one of the most special humans to ever grace this earth!
Anyone who got to even just meet you was blessed!
Memories of you will never die.
No one can put out your fire.
Nobody's fillin your shoes.
Now your singing with the choir and dancing with the crew.
Party hard in your mansion Jamo.
Your love and light will forever be felt.
I love you mate xoxo*

Last night I had the chance to say goodbye to my dear friend James Dawson Philp. Last night I performed a song which he had asked me to do, but I never got the chance to do for him.
This one's for you my friend. Fly high. Xx
Another beautiful person taken way too soon. RIP

At first, I didn't believe it, then after almost a hr overlooking posts I realised it's true. Can't actually believe it, Jamie was a friend, actually a mate throughout my time living in Sydney, always there when U would need someone to talk to, hangout with. A quirky yet gentle, kind, funny, decent guy. I'm shocked to hear of this news. My thoughts go out to his family and close friends through this very sad and difficult time. He was one of the decent ones. Gone too soon. Rip bro.

When I woke last Friday morning, it was with a terrible sense of foreboding for one of my dearest and closest friends.

So, I sent him text messages and called throughout the day but failed to reach him.

It wasn't until late at night that I received the terrible news that my dearest friend Jamie Philp had passed away.

He was found by his Mother that morning in the bathroom of the house they shared.

Jamie was what millennials would call my 'bestie'.

Not a week went by without a text message, phone call or a visit from him.

I recently fell from a ladder and sustained a serious head injury – it was Jamie who came to my rescue and who sat with me for 10 hours in Emergency while I underwent brain scans, neck and chest x-rays etc.

Jamie didn't drive and his mode of transport would vary from a scooter to a bicycle to being on foot and he would inevitably arrive late and dripping with sweat.

That's because Jamie was somewhere between a breath of fresh air and a whirlwind.

He could talk at a million miles an hour and could move just as fast.

So, when he got going, he was on a mission to reach his destination as quickly as possible, I suspect this was to avoid the scolding he might get for being so late.

Jamie was once a chef and loved to cook.

He often arrived at my home with samples of his latest culinary triumph.

It rubbed off on me and if I knew he was coming I'd busy myself in the kitchen and we'd make time to have a glass of red and share a meal together.

Life was never easy for my friend Jamie. In fact, each day was a challenge.

From childhood to becoming a man, his was a difficult journey and one that left its mark.

He struggled to rise above mental health issues, something that sometimes put him at odds with the law.

But, instead of being bitter, angry or envious Jamie was kind, considerate and caring.

His enthusiasm was infectious, and his personality brightened the room.

He was inclusive and generous, funny and cheeky.

It's only when something is gone that you realise what you have lost and by then it's too late.

On reflection, I was lucky to have known him and so privileged to have him in my life.

His memory lives on and will cause me to laugh and smile and be forever grateful that I could call him my friend.

Such a beautiful man, always had a way of making you feel like you were the only one in the room. Engaging, forthright, caring and giving of himself. Never had a single bump along the road of knowing him. To his family I say to you he was a beautiful friend to me. I am so sorry for devastating grief and shock you are going through. I feel sick and shocked to learn of his passing and so sad for anyone who had love for this loving soul. To his mother and son and family especially. Jamie you were one of a kind, I will love and miss you forever my beautiful friend.

I LUV U - so god dam much.

Thank you for allowing me to be in your life - you taught me so much. Your heart is so so big and full of love. Just know you were loved dearly, and the world had lost a very special soul.

Mandi Bickum

Heartbroken and heart shattered that you are gone! This time last week you viewed a silly pic i sent you. I am hurting to the depths of my soul with the news that found me today . I know my tears will eventually stop, but the pain never will. My last interaction with you was you going just a few months ago at my request to check in on my mum.... true Jamie style it took you two months. but true to our reciprocal love and respect you went above and beyond when u did. Jamie i love you so much that i wore your (my Jamie look) hair cut for 10 years, you know u were my top pic aa.my baby daddy. You have my word my beautiful boy. I will forever be here for your family Your mum , sis., son and nieces and nephew. I didn't want to be coming home for sorry business

But it seems this is how your bringing me home x i adore u my boy. I will always cherish ur mum sending me to bed in your room my last night at home in Sydney. Until i see u again in the streets of heaven as it was when i bump you on our streets in glebe xxx
